K239 BS Brooklyn

Brooklyn, the Cast-Iron Buildings and Industrial Revolution shows their strength of raw material.

Being a stronger product than other irons, the use of cast iron in construction allowed buildings to span greater distances. The material could be prefabricated offsite and it also allowed the delicate designs of the time to be mass-produced.

Being raw and unexceptionally beautiful, metal-looking-like designs makes the elevation unique and vivid.

Soho, the Cast-Iron Buildings and Industrial Revolution shows their strength of raw material. Being a stronger product than other irons, the use of cast iron in construction allowed buildings to span greater distances. The material could be prefabricated offsite and quickly put up on site. Color makes a design to come alive. Contrasting warm greys with cool, glacial blues makes dynamic colour scheme. Warm tones combined with raw blue tones are some of the most common colour that businesses use for branding - red says „confident and powerful”, blue stays for „calming and trustworthy”. Distinctive and unexpected colour connections are always acceptable. Using black, grey or white with some drop of navy blue are those run-of-the-mill neutral shades that become a backdrop for any modern and attractive palette that work with every style - from corporate to trendy

Wood accents are having a moment. With a natural ability to add depth and warmth to a range of stylish exteriors, wood has designers branching out and going with the grain when it comes to creating meaningful home details with a fresh, modern look, both interior and exteriors.

With all the dark colours of winter's palette, it's refreshing to find a trend that brings a little life and nature back into our schemes.

Wood grain is not only beautiful to look at, but really easy to work in – keep it modern by choosing either a permanent statement.
